

LOVE

8 October 2009 – ‘Love & Mortar’ is a new, groundbreaking 30 part half hour television reality documentary series, never before seen on South African television, featuring South Africa’s eco-couple Riaan and Michelle Garforth-Venter in their quest to build their ultimate bio-climatic home. On air from 12 January 2010 to August 2010 on the DSTV Home Channel 182, with each week’s new episode airing on Tuesday’s at 19h30.

In yet another of the many television firsts, the Garforth-Venter’s have conceptualised over the years in their successful television career, such as Wild Ltd, Bush Radar and DIY Met Riaan, their latest series aptly titled Love & Mortar invites viewers into their daily lives, revealing how they juggle their busy careers and schedules while building and furnishing their first bio-climatic family home, in a reality TV show format.

States Riaan and Michelle Garforth-Venter, “There are so many incredible products available now yet so little guidance available for the consumer to choose which is right for them and many products, once investigated, aren’t actually healthy for you or the environment. We hope to lift the curtain on the myths of eco-building and general products and show what can be done to live in a healthier, greener home.”

The series takes TV audiences on their first self-build home project following the couple every step of the way while questioning traditional construction methods and searching for eco-friendly alternatives available.

Love & Mortar will educate the audience about green building choices and lifestyle options, including environment solutions such as grey water systems, alternatives for waste management, electricity choices and insulation options while maximising entertainment and green learning.
